Office Hours: Monday, 3.00-4.00 and by appointment

Welcome to the course and to the School for Conflict Analysis and Resolution (S-CAR). This class is an introduction to the field of conflict analysis and resolution, and as the first course that many at S-CAR will take, it is deliberately broad. Other courses at S-CAR develop one or another of the themes in this introduction in greater depth.

This course examines definitions of conflict, diverse views of its resolution and explores thinking about human behavior and social systems as they relate to the origins of conflict and the role of conflict in violent and peaceful social change. It is designed to introduce you to academic thinking about conflict analysis and resolution and to help you think systematically and analytically about conflict.

This course will be run as a seminar with an emphasis on discussion and student presentations. We value critical thinking and therefore, it is imperative that students read the assigned books and articles prior to the class. Active participation in class discussions will be expected.

The goal of this course is to build the foundation for your work with the rest of us in the S-CAR community and with those in the field of conflict analysis and resolution.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

In addition to regular attendance and participation, two take-home exams, an analytical paper, and a group presentation of a case study (details to follow)..

The first take-home exam will account for 20% of the final grade. This exam will be handed out on October 3 and will be due October 11.

A 15-page (double-spaced, approximately 4,000 word) analysis of a conflict will form the basis for 35 % of the grade. This paper will be due on November 14.

For this paper, students can select from one of the assigned team presentation case studies or select one of their own to analyze. A basic book that provides background to the assigned case study is designated below and should be sufficient to provide the details of the conflict situation. The object of this paper is to reflect one's understanding of the tools of conflict analysis covered in the first section of the class. If students choose one of the case studies assigned for team presentations, the assigned book and an article or two will be sufficient to provide the narrative of the case because the focus on the essay should be to demonstrate one's ability to apply concepts of conflict analysis rather than an in-depth knowledge of a particular conflict. As noted, these papers are due on November 14 and will be the basis of 35 % of the final class grade.

A small group presentation of your case study will account for 25 % of your final grade.

The second take home exam will form the basis of the final 20 % of the grade. This exam will be handed out on November 14 and will be due in class November 21.

In all written assignments hard-copies are strongly preferred. Delays, deferrals, or a grade of "incomplete" for the course will be given only in cases of personal or immediate family crisis.

Please note: I use your GMU mail account as my primary means of communication outside normal class hours. You will need to activate this account and/or make sure any other account you use forwards your mail to it.

Students are unconditionally expected to abide by the GMU Honor Code. If you are unsure as to what constitutes plagiarism, for example in citation of others' work, feel free to consult with me prior to handing your own work in.

Case Studies for analytical paper and group presentations:

Students will select and/or be assigned by the second week (in order to achieve rough balance in group size) to one of the following four cases:

South Africa

Waldmeir, Paul. (1997). Anatomy of a miracle: The end of apartheid and the birth of the new South Africa. New York: W. W. Norton and Co.

Copper Strike:

Rosenblum, Jonathan D. (1998). Copper crucible: how the Arizona miners strike of 1983 recast labor-management relations in America, 2nd ed. Ithaca, N.Y.: Cornell University Press.

For this conflict, students may also enjoy:

For an historical perspective see:

Rai, Mridu (2004) Hindu rulers, Muslim subjects: Islam, rights, and the history of Kashmir. Princeton: Princeton University Press.

For a view from the inside:

Peer, Basharat (2010). Curfewed Night. NY: Scribner.

Northern Ireland

McKittrick, David (2001). Making sense of the Troubles: The story of the conflict in Northern Ireland. New York: Penguin.

An older classic:

Arthur, Paul & Jeffery, Keith (1988). Northern Ireland since 1968. London: Institute of Contemporary British History.

An insider's account of the peace negotiations (British perspective, Track-I):

Jonathan Powell (2009). Great hatred, little room: making peace in Northern Ireland. London: Vintage Books.

After the papers are completed and turned in, those case studies selected by student teams will be the subject of a group presentation. The students in each case study group will find it necessary to meet to adequately prepare a plan for the presentation. Time will be provided during class hours in weeks 10 and 11, but additional meetings or coordination by e-mail, phone, or other means may be necessary as well. This may represent a consensus among the group or alternative perspectives may be present. The group presentations (during weeks 12 and 13) will be a maximum of 1 hour (roughly 40 minutes to present and 20 minutes for class questions and discussions; time will be strictly enforced). The format of the presentation (materials, media, interactiveness, etc.) is decided by the group. The group's collective grade is assigned all individuals in it.
